

The German nation produced cultural giants like Goethe, Kant, Bach, Schiller and Beethoven. However, between 1933 and 1945, it enabled monstrous criminals like Hitler, Goebbels, Himmler, Heydrich, Mengele and Eichmann to initiate the most tragic event in the history of humanity, the industrialized extermination of Jews. A tragedy that requires a scientific explanation. This book describes the circumstances that pushed the many people who participated in this horrific process to revert mentally to the condition of wild animals.

This book by Professor Askenasy is an irreversible treatise about the reversibility of human nature.
